Drives a Hansom Cab

Copyright, Judge Co.

By James Montgomery Flagg

Nervy Nat-That cab seems to say, 'Nervy, YOU can drive a horse, eid chap! Come on!' The careless and trusting gentleman who owns the outfit must be sampling some wood alcohol in some near-by public house. Thus do hard drinks make soft snaps for the other fellow.

The Old Gentleman (from Otean)—I wanter hire yer buggy ter take me ter me darter's. Bhe lives on Fith Avenos. Now much ye gold ter Fith Avenos. Now much ye gold ter charge me? Nervy Nat-Fith Ave? Let's see; that will be twenty dollars, str. Jump right in, sif?

The Old Gentleman—Wa-a! thet dew seem a powerful sight o' money; but they told me ter fitm est how I'd hev ter loosen up to Noo York. Guess I'll go'ling with ye. The next man might say fitry.

Nervy Nat-His daughter lives on Fifth Ave. Isn't that just like your gentleman from the provinces-goes into detail so? I'll drive out to Dobb's Ferry and make him disgorge. Detective Slick-I'll take off these glasses and beard. I've got that "Nervy Nat" dead to rights. Heen trying for a month to catch him at some of his games.

Nervy Nat-Now Deacon Papper-corn, we'll get down to business. You can begin now on the good advice the folks at home gave you and loosen up-ley! I'm talking to you-you with the Grand Rapids on your chin. Come out of your may and make a deposit. In another minute I'll hand you one in the—Detactive Silek-Will you, my boy-will you? Get up against the real thing this trip, eh? Now, get back on your period and drive to the central office-to take effect immediately. You're wanted.

Nervy Nat-Suffering sleather that's a mean trick to play on me-and I had the money all speat. Now I owe myself about seven hundred dollars.
